Rubbing It In.

Sternly the prosecuting counsel cross examined the witness for the defense. At last the latter got so confused that instead of replying audibly to one question he nodded his head.

Whereupon the counsel demanded sternly:

"Why don't you answer the question?"

"I did answer it," the witness replied. "I nodded my head."

"Yes," was the reply, "I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up or down or from side to side."

The Best Thing He Did.

A melancholy looking man ferreted into the establishment of a photographer.

"I should like to have a picture of myself weeping beside my wife's grave," he explained.

"I fear I have not the necessary accessories here," said the photographer. Then he added, facetiously: "Could we arrange to have the portrait made at the grave itself?"

"No," said the man; "that's in New York state. It would be too expensive to go there. Just you fix up some kind of a grave here in the shop. I could weep on that. It's no trouble for me to weep anywhere."—Everybody's Magazine.

RAILWAY SPANS GREAT DESERT

Road in Australia Crosses Inhospitable and Waterless Stretch of Country.

TOOK FIVE YEARS TO BUILD

Daring and Skill of Engineers Conquers Most Desolate Waste in World—Heat and Insects Make Life Unbearable.

Melbourne.—When the Prince of Wales decided to make his recent journey from Perth to Adelaide by means of Australia's first transcontinental railway, it was a compliment to the daring and skill of the Australian engineers who conquered one of the world's most formidable deserts.

It was the late Lord Kitchener who suggested the line, pointing out that for strategic and other reasons western Australia should be linked with the other states of the commonwealth by an iron road.

But the great Victorian desert lay between, a barren, inhospitable and waterless stretch of country. Not a rivulet is to be found in the whole of this vast region. It is one dreary expanse of sand and limestone rock, relieved here and there by salt-bush, which even cattle refuse to eat. Worse still are the intense heat and the blood-sucking insects which abound.

Five Years Required.

The fact meant a five-year battle against terrible odds. It was only completed just before the armistice.

The survey work alone occupied two years, and cost £20,000, the total expenses of the undertaking amounting to over £7,000,000. Camels had to be requisitioned to carry the surveyors and their stores. The chief engineer records how it was impossible to use ink, as it instantly dried on the pen and the leads dropped out of the shrivelled pencils. To secure relief from the rays of the midday sun they had to bury themselves in holes in the sand, where they were attacked by fierce insects.

The route having been decided on, the steel rails were laid simultaneously from each end across the desert.

Dives of West Being Closed

Resorts That Have Bulk Large in Traditions Will Soon Be Only a Memory.

"OWL" IS THE LATEST TO GO

New Government of Mexico Frowns on Gambling and Other Evil Conditions Along the International Boundary—Orders Clean-Up.

Mexico, Lower California.—One by one the resorts whose names have bulked large in the traditions of the West are meeting an end. Latest to go is the "Owl" at Mexicali, which its operators and officials of the Cantu regime in Lower California freely admitted had paid large sums for permission to operate.

In the Owl were to be found all the attractions that went to make up the typical dance hall of frontier days. The building itself was new, the "old Owl" having been destroyed by fire last February, but the traditions of the place were much the same and those familiar with the older establishment were at home in the new.

A Busy Place.

The old Owl was a huge, barn-like structure. Gaming tables and some pool and billiard tables, surrounded by high seats for spectators, occupied its front spaces. Along one side ranged a lengthy bar, where in busy time ten or a dozen bartenders were no unusual sight. Further back was a stage with flimsy scenery, curtained "boxes," that were strongly reminiscent of half a century ago, and a number of plain seats and benches for those not inclined to the expensive semi-privacy of the "boxes."

From near the theater section a passage led to a space surrounded by several hundred small rooms, colloquially known as "the yard," where outcast women lived.

Much of the costly gambling paraphernalia that was used in this old establishment was saved when the building burned and was used later in the new "Owl."

Great Air Mail Hangar at Omaha

The transcontinental air mail hangar at Omaha, one of the stops in the New York to San Francisco air service.

As the country was for the most part flat, and not a river or a noticeable hill intervened, little grading work was necessary. It was simply a case of making an even bed on which the sleepers were quickly laid. Then came the placing of the steel rails across them by means of a track layer, and spiking and bolting them.

Very trying, however, was the heat, particularly during the summer months. It was often impossible at midday to touch the steel rails or handle a shovel without fear of blistering the fingers. The men had to be provided with rubber gloves to enable them to handle their tools, and also to save their finger nails from splitting, and wear masks as a protection against the insects. Life was only made possible by a liberal daily supply of ice, obtained from the refrigerating cars attached to the construction trains which followed them.

Discover Water.

At intervals of 50 miles or so, water tanks were built, the intention being to use these in connection with the working of the trains. They were to be supplied with water pumped from the reservoirs at Kalgourlie. But after two and a half years' work, during which the track had progressed at the rate of about a mile a day, the engineers realized that if a really efficient service was to be maintained the proposed method of obtaining water would have to be modified.

So they sent for a boring plant, and at a point 350 miles from Kalgourlie began boring for water. Everyone shook their heads, declaring there was no water in the whole of that barren land. But at a depth of 1,300 feet water was found.

This discovery of water not only relieved the engineers of considerable anxiety and greatly lessened their work, but it has changed the whole aspect of the country. Sheep now graze along the track, which a few years ago was a barren waste. Experts declare that the once formidable desert will become a great grazing country, carrying at least 3,000,000 sheep.

Used Stolen Money to Pay Attorney Who Freed Him

John Hartman of New York city, accused of stealing a pocketbook containing $10 from the home of Rose Avey, near Bryant, Ind., was acquitted when tried before Justice of the Peace Whitman of Bryant.

As soon as the decision was reached Hartman produced a pocketbook and took $2 from it to pay his attorney, Urban Bonifas, a young man recently admitted to the bar.

"Why that is my pocketbook," Mr. Avey said, when he saw Hartman produce it and the money. He was right, but Hartman could not be placed in jeopardy twice for the same offense, and he left town $8 to the good.

1,300-FT. SERPENT AS MOUND

Left by Ancient Peoples in Ohio as a Symbol of Religion—Built of Earth and Stone.

West Union, Ohio.—A great serpent 1,300 feet long, built of earth and stone, a symbol of the religion of ancient peoples, stands a few miles from here as the most interesting and important earthwork, left by the mound builders of Ohio.

Situated in a rather secluded spot, supposedly selected by the mound builders for privacy in performing their ancient rites, the massive reptile winds gracefully back from a glen to higher land. The serpent's head rests on a rock platform which presents a precipitous face to the descending sun and is about 100 feet high. The jaws of the mouth are widely extended in the act of swallowing an egg, represented by an oval ridge of earth.

SEVERE ON TOURISTS

Many Travelers Take Ships to Marselles or Venice to Escape Arguments at the Frontiers.

Constantinople.—Nine visas are required to carry a traveler from Constantinople to Paris on the Oriental express, and the task is so great most travelers take steamers to Marselles or Venice in preference to the jumbled rail trip across the Balkans, which necessitates endless controversies with officials at various frontiers.

An American going to Paris by rail must start with the visa of the United States consulate on his passport, then go to the Swedish legation to get the Bulgarian visa. The Serbian stamp is next in order. It must be followed by three Greek stamps.

Then visas must be had of the Italian and the French military controls.

Many passports are not large enough to carry all the stamps. An Englishman who recently attempted to get the collection on an old passport exhausted all the blank space in four coils. His embassy would not permit him to attach a blank sheet to his passport. Consequently he had to have a new one issued and started over again on the round.

Since the Polish disaster, bolshevik agitation has become so acute in Turkey that travelers are watched more carefully than ever before by the allied officials.

On a recent passenger ship from Batum, a so-called Russian colonel, whose conversation with British officials showed a decided ignorance of military affairs, was arrested. He had five passports in his trunk, with great quantities of soviet literature in many languages. The bogus colonel was sent to General Wrangel in the Crimea.

WOULD ADD TO COST OF LIVING

Housewives Will Do Well to Consider Pronouncement of Senator Harding.

FIRM FOR HIGHER TARIFF

At the Bidding of the Big Trusts He Stands for an Increase in the Price of Nearly All Commodities.

Out of the "involvements" of his plan for a return to "normalcy," Senator Harding has had a "revelment" that a high protective tariff is an economic necessity and is a big issue in the campaign.

The public in general and the American housewife in particular, struggling against the high cost of living, will be interested to learn that Senator Harding would like to add a little more here and there to the cost of commodities, by increasing the tariff taxes on them, which are always passed on to the consumer.

From the reposed arms of his rocking chair the senator had the following to say relating to schedule K, which is article 10 of the Republican covenant with tariff graft—in other words, the wool schedule:

"Farmers in this country sold their wool clips for 50 cents a few days ago. The market is altered now and I am informed that in Boston they are putting wool in storage and are not quoting any prices. We are having a practical demonstration of the economic necessity of the protective tariff."

But Senator Harding stopped short of the real facts, as he always does, which would explain this condition. It is characteristic of his "involvements" and "revelments" that they never explain anything.

Here are the important facts that Senator Harding did not mention: The wool industry in this country is controlled by the American Woolen company, commonly known as the wool trust.

The net profits of the American Woolen company for 1917 and 1918 (our two war years) were almost $28,000,000, more than three times its net profits for the seven preceding years. Its net profits in 1919 were $15,000,000.

The American Woolen company was indicted recently for profaneism. It set up the plea that "woolen cloth" is not "swearing apparel" under the Lever act, which is yet to be determined by the Supreme court.

The price of men's clothes in the last five years has increased 220.8 per cent.

When the prices of clothes began to decline because people refused to pay exorbitant prices, the American Woolen company retaliated upon the non-paying public and the administration which had brought about its indictment by closing down all of its plants and throwing its employees out of work.

These are the facts that explain why wool growers sold their clips recently for 50 cents and why wool is being stored in Boston with no quotations of prices.

The effect of a high protective tariff on wool would be to make every article of woolen manufacture cost more than it does now. A tariff increase would have the same effect upon other necessities.

Senator Harding, therefore, is entitled to the vote of every man and woman who would like to make the high cost of living still higher.

Points to Democratic Victory.

It is a sign of Democratic victory when men like John M. Parker, who was nominated for vice president by the Progressives on the ticket with Theodore Roosevelt in 1912, and Harold M. Ickes, the former Progressive leader in the central West, and that grand old philanthropist, Nathan Straus, who has for many years been providing the sick and the poor with pure milk from convenient stations in New York city, announce themselves for Cox and Roosevelt. It looks as if the grand rush to the Democratic standard has begun.

Appeals to All the People.

When Governor Cox says that in his opinion the total expenses of the national government can be reduced to $4,000,000,000 he is talking the kind of economy that means something. A government that is spending $6,000,000,000 a year does not pick the money from bushes. Every dollar of it must be produced in the sweat of the American people, and every dollar of it is a factor in the high cost of living—New York World.

"Newberrying" the Nation.

The tactics which the National Republican party is using in this 1920 presidential campaign are the tactics used in Michigan to elect Senator Truman H. Newberry.

It was the election of Newberry by the wholesale use of money which gave the Republicans the one vote needed to organize and control the United States senate and put Lodge at the head of the foreign relations committee, with the subsequent defeat of the treaty as a result.
